

RUSSIAN TROOPS

Have Crossed the Yalu is Latest Report.

Kaiser Bitterly Attacked in Speech In The Reichstag.

Speaker Said Germany Had Violated Neutrality On Several Occasions--Russian Contractors Impose on Purchasing Agents--Russians are Evacuating Strategic Points.

London, May 9.—(Bulletin)—The Seoul, Korea, correspondent of the Reuter Telegram Co., wires that a Russian force of unknown strength has crossed the Yalu river and entered Korea.

Accompanied by Manchurian mounted bandits, the Russians crossed far above Wiju, advanced southeast and occupied Changlin, 100 miles west of Song Jin, May 5.

THE NEXT BATTLE GROUND.

London, May 9.—Baron Hayashi, the Japanese minister here, looks for the next engagement of the war to take place at Liao Yang. He said today: "General Kuroki probably is on the march to Liao Yang and General Kurapatkin should give battle there." Indeed, from the signs of his concentration he may assume the offensive. But for his defeat at the Yalu river this movement might be very dangerous. Under existing conditions, however, General Kuroki ought to be able to drive back General Kurapatkin at Liao Yang.

KAISER BITTERLY DENOUNCED.

Berlin, May 9.—In the Reichstag today, Herr Bebel denounced the government for what he termed repeated breaches of neutrality in the Russo-Japanese war. These breaches, he said, indicated that Germany desires Russia to triumph. He cited the sale of Hamberg-American liners to Russia, and criticized the Kaiser's telegram to the Czar in which he expressed regret at the loss of Russian warships and said that the Russian losses were equally Germany's losses. Bebel took advantage of parliamentary immunity and attacked the emperor most pointedly.

RUSSIAN CRUISER DESTROYED.

St. Petersburg, May 9.—Report is current today that the Russian cruiser, Rurik, of the Vladivostok squadron, has been destroyed. Whether by accident or by the Japanese attack the report does not state.

RUSSIANS EVACUATING.

Chee-Poo, May 9.—Passengers just arrived here from Nuchwang confirm the report that the Russians have begun the evacuation of that place. Many troops and guns have already left, they say. The Russians at Nuchwang were aware that the railway had been cut north of Port Arthur by the Japanese but no details of fighting between the Japanese and Russians had been received.

RUSSIAN MINISTER DEAD

St. Petersburg, May 9.—M. Deplesk, former Russian Minister of Finance, died at 9 o'clock this morning. M. Deplesk was associated with Russian finances the greater part of his life. He was the son of a Russian general and was born in 1852. When but 20 years of age, he entered the office of the Russian Department of Finance and remained there until he was made minister.

RUSSIAN ARMY SCANDALS

Warsaw, May 9.—The newspaper, Ugotonza, states that War Commissioner Sasso recently ordered 10,000 reables worth of army boots from a wholesaler here. The boots, which were sent to Irkutsk, were for the most part returned on the ground that the soles were glued on instead of sewn and fell to pieces as soon as they were worn. This, says the paper, is a sample of Russian contracting scandals.

HOSPITAL STORES.

Left By the Russians When They Ran From Feng Wang Cheng.

Tokyo, May 9.—Last Friday, after sharp cavalry skirmishes at Erhtaitu, Fantaisu and other places, a detachment of infantry belonging to General Kuroki's army took Feng Wang Cheng.

The Russians, before retiring, exploded the magazine, but left large quantities of hospital stores, which are being used by the Japanese.

Refugees from the woods and small villages constantly are surrendering. The Russians buried many of their dead.

Natives in the vicinity of Feng Weng Cheng say that last Monday the Russians carried about 800 wounded through that place, and that their casualties probably were about 3,000.

GERMANY

Reported to Be Ceding More Boats to the Russian Government

St. Petersburg, May 9.—Admiral Skrydloff is going to Vladivostok. Renewed energy is being expended on the operations of the second Pacific Squadron, which will consist of 11 ironclads and 17 cruisers.

According to the latest project, the fleet will take the Cape Horn route, starting from Cronstadt by the end of July. Admiral Rojestvensky is now passing all his time at Cronstadt pushing forward the work.

Orders are out today for the commanding of the Sissoi, Veliki and the Navarin and Admiral Nachimovf immediately to take aboard armaments and prepare to start for the far East.

The fact that Germany has decided to strike off a considerable number of ships from her navy is particularly significant in spite of denials. The country has ceded two more torpedo boats to Russia.

RUSSIAN LOSSES

In the First Great Battle Grew as the Reports Come In Tokyo, May 9.—Every supplemental report received from General Kuroki, commanding the First Japanese army, increases the Russian casualties in last Sunday's battle at Chiu Tien Cheng on the Yalu river. The Japanese have buried about 1,400 Russians and have 503 of the enemy's wounded in the field hospitals. It is estimated that the total Russian casualties exceed 2,500. Over 300 Russian prisoners are en route to Matsuyama, where they are expected to arrive on Wednesday.

FATAL DEMONSTRATION.

Tokyo, May 9.—During a demonstration here yesterday an accident occurred in which 21 persons were killed and 40 injured. The victims mostly boys, were caught against a closed gate in an angle formed by the walls of the old palace, and were either crushed by the crowd or were pushed into an old moat and drowned.

LARGEST WARRANT EVER ISSUED

Was That Signed by Secretary Shaw Saturday.

Which Represented the Purchase Price Paid For the Panama Canal Concession.

Washington, May 9.—Secretary Shaw Saturday afternoon signed a treasury warrant for $40,000,000, which will be delivered next Monday to J. P. Morgan & Co., of New York, as disbursing agents of this government, on account of the Panama canal purchase. The warrant is dated May 9. This warrant is many times larger than any warrant ever before issued by this government. The largest sum previously covered by a single government warrant was for $7,200,000 paid to Russia in 1868 on account of the Alaskan purchase. The next largest sum was $5,500,000 paid in 1876 to the British government on account of the Halifax award, under the treaty of Washington for infringement of fisheries rights in Nova Scotia waters.

In 1889 this government paid Spain, through the French ambassador, $20,000,000 for the Philippine islands, but this sum was represented by four warrants of $5,000,000 each. The $75,000,000 agreed upon as the purchase price for the Louisiana territory was paid in 1803 by the assumption by the United States of the claims of citizens of this country against France amounting to $3,750,000, and the issue to France of certificates of stock in the sum of $11,250,000.

KILLED IN SAVING CHILD.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 9.—Michael Creamer, 73 years old, gave his life to save that of his grandchild. He was wheeling the baby in a go-cart when a runaway horse suddenly appeared. He could not get out of the way of the horse and he gave the cart a quick push. The horse struck him. The child did not awaken.

SULPHATE

OF COPPER EFFICACIOUS IN DESTROYING TYPHOID GERMS

As Well as Those of Cholera According to Important Discovery of Agricultural Department.

Washington, May 9.—The discovery by experts of the agricultural department that copper sulphate is efficacious in destroying the bacteria of cholera and typhoid in water is regarded as very timely in view of the work about to be commenced about the United States on the Panama Canal.

Several officers who are charged with the duty of creating better sanitary conditions sail for the isthmus tomorrow. At the agricultural department it is believed that many of the deleterious conditions with which these officers will have to deal, can be removed by the use of sulphate of copper.

It is also suggested that the use of a more concentrated solution of copper may be found effective in preventing the riot of vegetable growth in the canal itself which has always proved in certain sections more or less of an inconvenience, if not an obstacle to the engineers engaged in making the necessary excavations.

A thorough test of the new discovery will be made by the canal commission in the belief that no harm can and probably much good will result.

BOY DROWNS IN SIGHT OF BROTHER

Zanesville, Ohio, May 9.—While swimming in the Muskingum river Sunday afternoon, Walter Marple of Gilbert Station, aged 17, was seized with cramps and drowned. His body has not been recovered.

Samuel Marple, an older brother, sought to jump into the river to rescue his brother, and fought madly with several men who sought to prevent him. They finally overpowered him.

BODY

Of Young Wentz Found in Forest

HAD BEEN MISSING SINCE LAST OCTOBER

And Rewards of Thousands of Dollars Were Offered.

THEORY OF MURDER ACCEPTED

And it is Expected That Post Mortem on Well-Preserved Body Will Tell the Tale

Briston, Tenn., May 9.—Lying face downward at a point in the mountains which has been passed and repassed perhaps a thousand times in the search for him, the body of E. L. Wentz, the young millionaire mine owner of Philadelphia was found near Big Stone Gap Sunday afternoon. Young Wentz disappeared on October 14, 1903, from near Kelley View.

He had been in the habit of riding over the Virginia coal and iron property daily for several years and it was while making one of the inspections that he disappeared. His horse was found standing near the railroad and it was about a mile from where the horse was found standing, and in the woods, that the body was found, face downward. He was dressed in the clothes which were familiar to almost every one in the neighborhood of Big Stone Gap, but these were scorched. The body was laid bare because of a recent forest fire which burned the leaves which had covered it. There was nothing on the face or body to indicate violence. It was found by a young man who knew Wentz and identified his clothes. The body because of the cold weather in the mountains since last September, was in an excellent state of preservation. A post mortem will be held on the body of the dead man, when it is believed it will be shown that young Wentz was murdered and the body then concealed.

GILLESPIE

WAS PLACED ON TRIAL FOR MURDER MONDAY.

Work of Securing a Jury to Try Alleged Soricide Will Not Be Difficult.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 9.—James Gillespie's trial began at 9:30 this morning. He was preceded by Myron Barbour, Mrs. Carrie Barbour and Mrs. Belle Seward, who are charged with being accessories to the murder of Elizabeth Gillespie and Mr. and Mrs. Barbour are relatives by marriage. These three have been at liberty on bail.

After Judge Downey had convened court it was decided to try all defendants at the same time. The jury box was filled with the first twelve names called and Captain Coles for the defense began examining prospective jurors. It was plain from the start that the work of securing a jury would not take as long as was at first expected, and the trial will proceed soon.

DETROIT ATTORNEY KILLED HIMSELF

Detroit, Mich., May 9.—Edward A. Gott, one of the best known attorneys and promoters, shot himself in the head at his home, 705 Woodward avenue, about 7 o'clock this morning, and died probably instantly. Mrs. Gott found the body on a couch in a front room on the second floor. The cause of the suicide is believed to be business worry. Deceased was an attorney for the Wabash Railroad.

HYDROPHOBIA CAUSED DEATH

Cleveland Man Died in Chicago Hospital.

He Was Bitten Three Weeks Ago By Pet Collie and Efforts to Save Him Failed.

Cleveland, O., May 9.—The reign of terror that has existed in the east end of Cleveland for the last three weeks over the presence of a mad dog that has been running the streets, culminated Saturday night in the death of Mr. Charles T. Carruth, of 35 Delmont street, of hydrophobia at the Presbyterian hospital in Chicago. Mr. Carruth was one of the six who were bitten by the dog.

Three weeks ago Saturday, as Mr. Carruth was standing at the corner of Delmont street and Euclid avenue, waiting for a car, a brown dog that looked like a collie, suddenly sprang at Mr. Carruth and buried his teeth in Mr. Carruth's left hand. Mr. Carruth was compelled to kick the dog several times before he would release his hold. Carruth immediately went to the office of Dr. T. J. Carter on Euclid avenue, who canterized the wounds, which were mostly in the fleshy part of the hand. Mr. Carruth was of a highly nervous temperament and seemed greatly worried over the matter, but said nothing to his family until last Friday, when he told his wife that the sight of water made him feel strange, and that it was impossible for him to drink. Dr. Carter told him that it must be imagination. This soothed Mr. Carruth, who managed to drink a cup of coffee at his breakfast. Preoccupied during the day he had a talk with his brother, Louis Carruth, and they decided to leave for the Pasteur Institute in Chicago that night. They arrived there early Saturday morning and went directly to the institute. In the afternoon the victim was taken to the Presbyterian hospital and Mrs. Carruth received a telegram from Mr. Louis Carruth later that her husband was dead. The manner of his death was not detailed in the telegram.

OHIO LAW

MAKING PROPERTY RESPONSIBLE FOR GAMBLING LOSSES

Will Receive a Test in the Supreme Court of the United States at Washington.

Washington, May 9.—The case of William Marvin vs. Belle B. Trout, docketed in the United States supreme court Saturday, bids fair to decide the constitutionality of the Ohio state law rendering property, in which money is lost by gambling, liable for the loss.

Mr. Marvin is the owner of the property in Findlay, Ohio, in which Frank I. Trout lost $5,000 playing faro. Belle Trout brought suit to recover this sum from the owner of the premises and won her suit in the Ohio courts. Marvin appealed to the United States supreme court, alleging the law to be unconstitutional.

GUILTY

Was the Verdict of the Jury Which Tried Mrs. Mary Powell For Murder.

Dover, Del., May 9.—Mrs. Mary A. Powell was Saturday night convicted of the murder of Estella Albin, the jury finding the punishment at imprisonment for life. The trial was in progress one week and the jury deliberated two hours.

Estella Albin lived with Mr. and Mrs. Powell at Powers Beach. On February 9, she was found murdered in the attic of the house. Mrs. Powell was arrested and confessed, but declared the act was committed in self defense.

The evidence showed that illicit relations existed between Mr. Powell and Miss Albin and the prosecution endeavored to prove that Mrs. Powell killed the girl in a jealous frenzy.

EPISCOPALIANS

At Boston Refuse to Change Name of Church.

Inter-Church Conference at Philadelphia Issues Appeal

To the Public Conscience on the Subject of Divorce--Methodist Conference Ministers at Los Angeles Conduct Services Sunday in all The Churches.

Boston, May 9.—The committee of fifteen, appointed to consider a change in the legal name of the Episcopal church, has made a report to the effect that it is not advisable, at this time, to change the name of the church.

At the San Francisco convention the diocese of Milwaukee presented a memorial requesting that the name, "Protestant Episcopal church in the United States," be changed to that of "the American Catholic church in the United States." The request was not passed upon directly by the convention, but a committee of five bishops, five priests and five laymen was appointed to ascertain the mind of the church and report to the Boston convention.

The first appendix to the report observes that the above name can hardly be considered a hindrance to growth, since all growth has been in connection with the name.

The second appendix says: "The indications shown are most abundant that the majority of our bishops, clergy and laity are profoundly dissatisfied with our present title, and many apply to it more or less derogatory adjectives."

The statement concludes with the suggestion that the Boston convention enact legislation by which the words "Protestant Episcopal" shall be omitted from the title page of the prayer book until such time as the people can be brought to favor suitable legislation.

The third statement which is being signed by Rev. John H. Egar of Rome, N. Y., and suggests that the name be changed to that of "the church in the United States of America."

The two remaining members of the committee, Bishops John Scarborough of New Jersey, and W. A. Leonard of Ohio, make no suggestions.

APPEAL TO PUBLIC CONSCIENCE.

Philadelphia, May 9.—The inter-church conference on Marriage and Divorce, a body representing officially 14 leading denominations, has issued through its secretary, Rev. William H. Roberts, D. D., an appeal to the public, calling attention to several aspects of the divorce question.

The paper is the beginning of a national campaign of education on the subject. Already action has been taken by the conference looking toward the prevention of the remarriage, by ministers of other communions, of divorcees whom clergyman of their own faith have refused to marry.

Following is an abstract of the address:

"We plead for a recognition of the sanctity of marriage. * * * Behind the monster of polygamy, behind the specter of the lax divorce courts, with its collusions, its corruptions and its contagion, stands the sad fact of the low ideal of marriage. It is true the element of mutual consent and the element of legal contract enter into it, but underneath and behind these, as the sure foundation, stands the revelation of God's holy word.

"Marriage is the institution of God Himself and is sanctified under the solemnities of the old sanction by our blessed Lord. This is the root of the matter. Reformation must begin here. Children must be taught it. Young men and young women must be made to feel it.

the horrible tendencies to facile and frequent divorce rests, we believe, upon impressing and inculcating such an intense conviction of what marriage means that it will cease to be entered into 'unadvisedly or lightly.'

"Just now polygamous Utah looms large and ugly before our minds. But we must look nearer home to realize the true condition of things. The proportion of divorces to marriages in 1902 in eight states reporting statistics is as follows: In Maine, 1 to 6; in New Hampshire, 1 to 8.3; in Vermont, 1 to 10; in Massachusetts, 1 to 16; in Rhode Island, 1 to 8; in Ohio, 1 to 8.8; in Indiana, 1 to 7.8; in Michigan, 1 to 11. In these states there has been a steady and rapid increase in divorces during the decade, and this increase is believed to be true of the country at large."

CONFERENCE MINISTERS

PREACHED.
Los Angeles, Cal., May 7.—Bishops, ministers and Presiding Elders attending upon the Methodist General Conference occupied pulpits in Protestant churches in Los Angeles, Pasadena and all the surrounding cities and towns within a radius of 50 miles Sunday, and every place of worship was crowded at morning and evening services to listen to distinguished speakers.

At San Diego, Rev. J. W. Bashford of Ohio Wesleyan University, at Santa Barbara, Rev. Dr. E. J. Lockwood, and at Potomac, Rev. Dr. Buckley, editor of the Methodist Review, spoke to great crowds.

BOTH ARMS

Pulled From Their Sockets When Mother Tried to Save Babe From Burning to Death.

Cincinnati, O., May 9.—Suffering terrible agony little Esther Hall, aged 2 1/2 years, was taken to the City Hospital Sunday, both arms being pulled from their sockets. While playing about her home at 319 Central avenue the little one ventured too near the stove and would have burned herself had her mother's attention not been attracted.

The mother ran to the little one, and catching her about the waist, lifted her away. The little one was thrown from her balance and caught at a chair. The impetus of falling and the sudden jerk pulled her arms from the sockets.

ELECTRIC BELL

Announced the Visit of Chicken Thief and He Was Killed Sunday Morning.

Columbus, O., May 9.—Jim Brady, colored man, was killed early Sunday morning at 1859 East Broad street while in the act of robbing A. McCullough's chicken coop. The owner of the place had been troubled with chicken thieves and he put an electric alarm in his room, which was connected with the henhouse. When Brady entered the barn the alarm announced the presence of a marauder and McCullough and his son went out to investigate. They were armed with a shotgun and a revolver. Both fired at Brady, a bullet from the revolver in the senior McCullough's hands killed the thief. The McCulloughs are held by the police pending investigation.

SQUALL

UPSET A SAILBOAT ON BUCKEYE LAKE

And James Haines and Clarence Diehl Had a Narrow Escape From Drowning.

Messrs. James Haines of the Haines Bros. Jewelers of this city, and Clarence Diehl, also of this city, had a thrilling experience at Buckeye Lake on Sunday that they will not soon forget. They had chartered a small sailboat at the park, and had gone out on the water a considerable distance, when a squall came up, striking the boat with force, causing it to capsize and capsizing, throwing both the occupants into the water. With rare presence of mind the two men swam to the boat and clung to it until a man named Fisher, came to their assistance and rescued them from their perilous position. They were taken to the shore, where they managed to secure a change of clothing, after which they took the first car for home. In the mix-up the men lost their fishing rods and their watches got a good soaking.

THE COURTS

JUDGE MAXWELL OF HOLMES, WILL BE HEAR TUESDAY

To Try the Case of Ohio vs. George Moore, Charged With Burglary—Court News.

In the common pleas court this morning in the case of the State of Ohio vs. George Moore, charged with burglary, the defendant made application to the court for a change of venue on account of bias and prejudice against him, claiming that he could not for that reason have a fair trial in this county. The judge overruled the motion. The defendant then filed papers claiming that the judge was prejudiced and biased against him, and for that reason could not have a fair trial in this county. Thereupon it became necessary to procure another judge, and Judge Maxwell of Millersburg, will try the case.

MAYOR CRILLY

ISSUES COMMENDATORY PROCLAMATION TO POLICE

In View of the Order Maintained in Newark By Them Last Saturday.

Because of the excellent work done by the Newark police force Saturday Mayor Crilly has issued the following self-explanatory communication to Chief of Police James Sheridan:

Mayor's Office, Newark, O., May 8, 1904.

Chief of Police.

Sir—I feel considerable pride in being able to commend, in the highest terms, the manner in which you and the force under your command, cared for the safety and property of the citizens of this city, and the many visitors within the city, on Saturday last.

That such a crowd of people could congregate without a single accident or fight, without one case of pocket-picking, assault, robbery or house-breaking having occurred, establishes a new record for circus days in Newark. That the work of the police is alone entitled to the credit for this is made apparent in the fact that numerous thieves and pick-pockets are known to have followed the show to our city.

You will cause this communication to be read at roll call tonight.

The statement of Judge Parker's position on the public questions of the day and hour is as briefly put forth in decisive and unmistakable language as President Roosevelt lately issued as the coming Republican platform was muddy and evasive. Parker believes in hitting the trusts through the tariff, by needed State laws and the determined enforcement of Federal anti-trust laws, evaded by the Roosevelt administration after the supreme court had passed on them. Parker will enforce as the supreme law of the land what Roosevelt dodges and blathers about. He believes in the supreme court decision, which Attorney General Knox declares he will not "run amuck" to enforce, which is another way of saying that the trusts may do as they please.

Comical Sayings by the Little Men and Women

THE friends of Miss Belle Hagner, social secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt, tell with great glee a story of her early childhood.

When she was four years old she broke some rule of parental discipline and was turned over to her father for correction.

"Belle," said her father, "I am grieved to say that I shall be obliged to spank you."

"Father," the future social secretary replied, "you would not strike a woman, would you?"—New York World.

Teacher—Who helped you with this essay, James?

Pupil—Nobody, sir.

Teacher—Now, tell the truth. Did not your brother help you?

Pupil—No, sir; he did it all himself.—New Orleans Picayune.

Mrs. Leslie M. Shaw, with her daughters, Miss Emma and Miss Enid, visited San Francisco last month, and many social functions were given there in honor of the secretary of the treasury's family.

At a tea one afternoon Mrs. Shaw, smiling toward her daughters, said: "When Enid was four or five years old she used to repeat at night the little prayer, 'Now I lay me.'"

"I suppose that millions of children have said 'Now I lay me' millions of times, but I doubt if the simple and charming words of the prayer ever suggested a question so unusual as they did to Enid.

"She one night repeated the prayer reverently and then asked me, with a puzzled frown:

"Mother, if I should die before I wake, how would I know I was dead?"—New Orleans States.

THE ANNUAL MAY MEETING

Of the Licking County Democracy to Be Held in Newark, Saturday, May 14, 1904.

At a meeting of the Democratic County Central Committee, held on Saturday, April 30, 1904, it was decided that the annual May meeting of the Democracy of Licking county should be called to meet in Newark on Saturday, May 14, and shall be called to order at 10 o'clock a. m. by the chairman of the Democratic Central Committee, who shall be recognized as temporary chairman of the meeting until the committee on permanent organization shall have reported.

It shall be the business of the temporary chairman of said convention to announce a committee on permanent organization, consisting of one member from each precinct in the city of Newark, and each township and precinct in the county, said committee to be selected by the Democratic voters present from each ward and township, each acting separately.

In like manner committees consisting of one member from each township, ward and precinct shall be chosen as follows:

Committee on time and mode of making nominations.

Committee to select and report delegates to the State Convention.

The committee on permanent organization shall at once proceed to elect and report to the convention a president, two vice presidents and two secretaries of said convention.

The other committees as above named shall meet at once to perform their duties and make their respective reports to the convention.

In voting on the reports of the committees on all questions, resolutions, or any other business before the meeting, the secretary shall call the roll of the townships and wards and each township and ward shall be entitled to one vote for every 25 votes cast for Hon. Tom L. Johnson for governor of the state at the November election, 1902, and one for every fraction of 13 votes.

The Democrats present from each township and precinct shall constitute the delegation from the same, and the votes shall be cast as they direct by one of their members chosen by themselves.

Scandals are abroad concerning some of our army transports. It is declared that a number of them have grounded owing to the intoxication of the officers and crews and the lack of discipline and intelligent seamanship. Inasmuch as these transports convey a large number of persons and much valuable property the seriousness of these charges is evident. The transports are controlled by the war department, but are not officered by either regular army or naval officers.

The population of Korea is 17,000,000, including 25,000 Japanese, who control the country's activities.

LONG SIEGES.

The Time Various Strongholds Defied the Attacking Forces.

In spite of the shells rained by the Japanese upon Port Arthur, that stronghold, army officers at Washington believe, will be able to stand, even without relief, for a number of months to come. In substantiation of such a conclusion they point to precedents.

For instance, it took 132 days for the Germans to bring Paris to her knees a generation ago. During January, 1871, no fewer than 10,000 shells were rained on to the doomed town every day, and of these 500 fell into the city proper.

For ninety-four days Plevna defied the nick of the Russian army although its defenders were hopelessly outnumbered, and on Dec. 16, 1877, after the last grain of rice had been eaten, the indomitable Turks sallied forth and tried to new their way through the Russian legions, but were compelled to surrender.

Khartum withstood the Mahdi and his hosts for 341 days under the brave direction of Gordon, and in Kars General Williams, with 15,000 men, with provisions for three months and ammunition for three days, kept an investing army of 50,000 at bay from June to November.

Richmond was defended by General Lee through a year of terrible fighting until the seizure of his lines of supply compelled him to evacuate it on April 2, 1865; Lucknow held out for eighty-six days, when General Havelock went to its relief, and Strassburg, with all its strength, defended by a garrison of 17,000 men, had to surrender to the Germans after a siege of forty-eight days.

Among the other notable sieges Mafeking survived seven months, Kimberley 123 days, Ladysmith 118, Potchefstroom 94, Mafeking 72, Mafeking 77 and Chitral 40 days.—Exchange.

Irrigating Rice Fields in Texas.

Because water refuses to run up hill and because his rice fields happen to be on a somewhat elevated portion of ground many an ingenious planter in Texas has been obliged to resort to an elaborate device for the proper irrigation of them.

On a slight elevation at the back of the fields one planter has instituted what people in that vicinity style "an impromptu fountain." In reality it is nothing but a three inch iron pipe, protruding from the ground. When the rice fields need it the pipe is opened, huge pumps started and the water bubbles up, to flow away in hundreds of tiny rivulets and streams, which flood the thirsty rice fields. Aside from its benefits from the agricultural point of view, this obliging fountain presents a pretty spectacle when in operation.—New York Tribune.

Nemesis of the Bulls.

From Bordeaux wild scenes are reported during a bullfight at Benette recently. One of the matadores was making a pass at his third bull when somehow the animal buried the sword from his hand, and the weapon, after flying high in the air, fell on the head of an old sea captain in the auditorium, who sustained a slight fracture of the skull and a deep wound two inches long over the left eye. The same bull caught another torero napping at the critical moment and gored him so severely that he had to be removed to the hospital. The spectators, considering these mishaps as proving the incompetence of the matadores, gave expression to their opinion after the approved method of smashing the benches, hurling them into the arena and leaving the building.—London Globe.

Voracity and Veracity.

While cleaning a large pike Mrs. John Harris of Seaford, Del., was surprised to find when she cut it open another pike of ordinary size in its stomach. After finishing cleaning and salting the first pike she started to clean the second and was still further amazed when she discovered another pike in the second one's stomach. She proceeded to cut open the third one and was still more astonished to find a minnow in its stomach with a small hook in its mouth. She called her husband to look at the four fish, and he declared he had never seen or heard tell of so many fish being in the stomach of one fish. The pike was caught in Hearn's millpond, near Seaford, a place noted for large pike.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The King of the Cocos.

The sovereign who reigns over the smallest monarchy in the world is the king of the Cocos, a group of islands near Sumatra. These islands were discovered about 500 years ago by the captain of the Keeling, but were comparatively little known till 1825, when Mr. Ross, an Englishman, visited them, was struck by their beauty and took up his abode there. It is his grandson, Mr. George Ross, who now holds sway over the Cocos.

Torpedo Nets.

Warships have absolutely no protection from torpedoes. In recent years much time has been spent in experimenting with nets made of steel wire, rope, etc., but the modern torpedo has a scissors arrangement which cuts a hole through which the torpedo may pass to the ship. Because of the yielding nature of a net the torpedo does not explode until it strikes the hard side of a ship.

Theater For Rehearsals Only.

Maiden Lane contains the most curious theater in London, if not in the world. There is no fixed hour for the performances at this strange theater. They take place any time between 10 in the morning and 6 in the evening. Nothing is charged for admission, and the actors there have to pay instead of being paid. It is called the Rehearsal theater, and only rehearsals take place there.

POLITICS IN JAPAN.

Constitution Is Framed on the Lines of Germany's.

CABINET DEPENDS ON THE LORDS

Without Support of the House of Peers, It Cannot Pass Bills—Count Yamagata the One Man Able to Control the Peers—House of Representatives Gaining in Power.

The history of the slow formation of parties in Japanese politics, coupled as it is with the outbreak of the present war and the fall of Marquis Ito from political power, forms one of the most interesting stories of modern Japan, says John F. Bass, the Tokyo correspondent of the Chicago News.

Japan's constitution is framed after the German constitution because the German constitution preserves to a great degree the influence of the sovereign in political life. The cabinet under the Japanese constitution looks to the mikado and not to the house of representatives for its support. It does not seek the favor of the people, but the good will of the sovereign.

The influence—indeed, the very existence—of party, therefore, in the Japanese parliament is due to the tendency of the individual to develop along modern lines of government rather than any place occupied by party by virtue either of the institutions of the country or the new form of government adopted.

Take the present Japanese government. It represents not the electoral vote of the people, but the victory of the two great clans of Japan, the Satsuma and Chosui, those clans which were prominent in the restoration of the power of the emperor. Their rule by virtue of their aristocracy.

The Satsuma and Chosui clans originated in the south of Japan at the strait of Simonsokel. The Satsuma clan was south of the strait, the Chosui north. The Satsuma clan produced the great soldiers of Japan, and the head of the clan is now Admiral Yamamoto, minister of the navy. The Chosui clan produced such statesmen as Ito and Kodama.

The house of representatives cannot force a minister to resign—that is to say, theoretically it cannot—because the ministry can theoretically dissolve the house of representatives as many times as the house fails to support it. The cabinet seeks the favor of the sovereign. As long as it has his support, it can according to the constitution continue to rule. Curiously enough, the discretion of the sovereign prevents a serious or permanent breach between the representatives of the people and the government.

However independent of the house of representatives the cabinet may seem in theory, in practice the house is gaining more power. The cabinet may dissolve the house a number of times, but if on re-election the people support the action of the house the emperor is sure to dismiss his cabinet, saying that a cabinet that does not retain the support of the people cannot have his confidence.

With the house of peers it is different. Without the support of the upper house the cabinet can pass no bills. Moreover, the cabinet cannot dissolve the house of peers. It is of the highest importance that some one in the government should be able to carry the house of peers, and in the present government, Count Yamagata is the one man in Japan who is able to control the house of peers. Therefore the government has need of him.

In the house of peers there are no parties, only spheres of influence or cliques depending entirely on the personality of leaders, but in no way on political principles. The theoretic has so little hold on the Japanese people that parties founded on political doctrines are exotic plants.

Marquis Ito some years ago conceived the idea that a strong party organization in the house of representatives was the one thing that would benefit Japan and put the government on a more democratic basis. He organized, therefore, that great heterogeneous party, the Senka. But after having organized it he found it very difficult to manage. Still, with his great acumen as a politician he might in time have been able to control this big party if unforeseen opposition had not arisen.

Marquis Ito is called in Japan "the eight faced." His friends put it that he was trained in the old days of extra-territoriality and is very timid in international affairs. His enemies say that he combines with his great ability a mind that changes with each political wind.

The fact is that Marquis Ito, seeing the growth of power on the people's side, determined to control not only the imperial will, but also the house of representatives. Vanishing ambition proved his fall. He lost both. He had the ear of the emperor and also was at the head of this great party of the people. His plan was to play off one against the other, control the cabinet and be the real ruler of Japan. But revolt came from both sides.

The Senka party showed hostility to the imperial plan and would not respond to the tight rein of Marquis Ito. At the same time the emperor, influenced by the nobility, sent for Ito and informed him that he must confine himself to playing one part. Either he must resign his position as leader of the Senka party or he must lose the royal ear. Marquis Ito resigned the leadership of the Senka and naturally at the same time lost much of his influence over the emperor.

Anniversary ...Flowers

[Original.]

Some years ago I was sent by a client on some legal business to a small village in New Hampshire.

"There are no hotels in the place," said my client, "worthy of the name, but I will give you a note of introduction to a family who may consent to take you into their home."

The letter was to a Miss Colburn, a middle aged spinster who lived with her brother a few years older than herself, and a sister a few years younger. I was received into the family and provided with every comfort at their disposal. Great stress was laid upon the fact that I lived in New York. For some reason New York seemed to them to be a Mecca, a Jerusalem, a Bethlehem, a place holier than other places. None of them had ever been there and knew nothing about what a wicked city New York is. I did not enlighten them for fear of touching some tender spot, some grief with which the place was connected. I noticed that only Mr. Colburn and the younger Miss Colburn ever referred to New York, and when they did so the elder sister, Mary, maintained perfect silence, as if they were speaking of the tomb of some one well beloved.

One day I noticed on a table in the living room a vase filled with a dozen American Beauty roses. I also noticed that the members of the family spoke low and trod softly.

That evening the sisters went upstairs early, the brother remaining below with me.

"I wonder," he said, "if you know in New York Mr. Theodore Carroll?"

"I do not," I replied.

He looked surprised.

"You must remember," I added, "that New York is a very large city."

Then he grew confidential and gave me an explanation of what to me had been a mystery. A quarter of a century before a man had appeared in the village to make it his headquarters for the time that he would remain in the vicinity while making surveys on the railroad that was then being "located." He was thirty-five years old, a college graduate, and had charge of the engineering work of that division of the road. Like myself, he had been lodged at the Colburns, the father and mother of the family being at that time living. He fell in love with Mary Colburn, then eighteen, and his love was returned. Notwithstanding that he was city born and bred and she a country girl, he asked her to marry him, and she consented.

Preparations were made for the wedding, which was to take place as soon as Carroll concluded his engineering work on that division of the railroad. Mary was supremely happy. Carroll was at times boyish, at other times depressed. He was all that a lover could be to his fiancée. Indeed he seemed to have a morbid dread that he should lose her.

The very morning of the wedding misfortune fell upon the lovers, the family, indeed the whole village, since everybody was interested in the affair. When Mary's brother went to Carroll's room to announce that all was ready, he found him in a swoon. Beside him on the floor was a letter from a woman who claimed to be his wife.

When Carroll came to himself he admitted that the woman had really been married to him, but he had left her, and he had evidence to indicate that she was dead. She had heard of his approaching marriage and had written him to say that she was living and so long as she lived he should never wed legally.

That was the most melancholy day the village had ever known. The girl who had expected to become a bride bore up bravely, but it was plain that she suffered inexpressible agony. Carroll pleaded his cause with her, excusing himself for not having told of his former marital complication on the ground that it was a thing of the past which was a horror to him and which he believed ended forever by death. Mary did not blame him. She sat listlessly while he talked of it, and when he had finished and he pressed his lips to hers in an adieu she went to her room and did not see him again. Carroll went to New York to take steps to secure a divorce, though Mary told him that she would not marry a divorced man. Hoping to win her consent in time, he commenced proceedings, which so far as the Colburn family heard had never ended. On every anniversary of the wedding day there came a box of flowers. Carroll had continued to write for two years, then his letters had ceased. But the flowers kept on coming.

Such was the statement given me by Mary Colburn's brother. I was profoundly interested in it and determined when I reached New York to look Carroll up and solve the mystery of a divorce case that had lasted a quarter of a century. On returning to the city I sought my client, reported my action in the case upon which I had been employed, then asked him if he knew of the romance that hung over the Colburn family.

"Yes," he said, changing his tone from a business to a sympathetic one. "I ought to know something about it, since I send flowers to Mary Colburn once a year."

"But Carroll?"

"Carroll has been dead for twenty-two years. He died just before he would have surely obtained his divorce. I was with him when he died, and he charged me to keep the secret of his death, but to send flowers every year on the anniversary of what was to have been his wedding day."

EVERETT P. MOORE.

FAMED AS AN ORATOR.

W. Bourke Cockran, Member of Congress from New York.

W. Bourke Cockran of New York, who recently engaged in a sensational controversy in the national house of representatives with John D. Alcott of Pennsylvania, during the course of which the latter charged Mr. Cockran with accepting pay for his support of McKinley in 1896, is gifted with splendid oratorical powers and is perhaps the most brilliant debater now in congress.

Mr. Cockran is a native of County Sligo, Ireland, and was educated in France. His parents intended him for the priesthood, but the career that had been planned for him was not to his liking, and at the age of seventeen he came to America. In 1876 he was admitted to the bar and began the practice of law. He soon began to take an interest in politics and attracted the attention of John Kelly, then leader of Tammany Hall.

He was elected to the Fiftyth congress from New York city and made a good record, but declined a re-election. Four years later, however, he again went to congress, serving two terms. About this time he had a falling out with Richard Croker and until last fall had not been active in New York city's local politics.

As a lawyer Mr. Cockran has been connected with many cases of national importance, and his practice has brought him both fame and wealth. In appearance Mr. Cockran is impressive. He has a big head set on broad shoulders and is of magnificent physique. His voice is clear and resounding, and there is just a touch of brogue in his speech. Mr. Cockran was elected to the Fifty-eighth congress to succeed George B. McClellan, mayor of New York.

STARTLED NAVAL EXPERTS.

Senator Hale of Maine, Who Thinks Battleships Obsolete.

Senator Eugene Hale of Maine, who recently criticized modern battleships, declaring that the lessons of the war between Japan and Russia show them to be vulnerable and unsafe, is chairman of the senate committee on naval affairs and one of the foremost naval authorities in congress.

While Senator Hale's views will not find many supporters among naval men, no less an authority than the late Vice Admiral Makaroff held the same opinion regarding the value of heavily armored ships. This class of vessel was his pet aversion, and while other naval men regarded the big battleship, protected by its thick wall of steel, as the safest place in a sea fight, Admiral Makaroff never tired of contending that it was the most dangerous. Strangely enough, it was on a battleship that he met his death by just such an accident as he had constantly urged was likely to happen.

Senator Hale is a native of Maine, received an academic education and was admitted to the bar in 1857. He began the practice of law in Ellsworth and for nine years was prosecuting attorney of Hancock county. After serving several years in the state legislature he was elected to congress, remaining in the lower house ten years. He was elected to the senate to succeed Hannibal Hamlin, took his seat March 4, 1881, and has since been regularly re-elected. Senator Hale was appointed postmaster general in 1871, but declined, and also refused a cabinet position under President Hayes.

W. BOURKE COCKRAN.

Bread Cast On the Waters

[Original.]

It was in the spring of 1865 that the wife of Colonel Travers, who had fallen in one of the battles of the civil war fighting for the Confederacy, called one of her former slaves into her house and thus spoke to him:

"Zach, you have for some time been a freeman; but, unlike the rest of my men and women, you have continued to stay with me and work for me. I have not been supplied with food, for you have always served me faithfully. You know that besides this plantation I own a small one in the next county. It is of no use to me, since I have no people to work it. The buildings are going to ruin, and the fences having been used for firewood by the soldiers of both sides, the place is left entirely unprotected. I have determined to give the plantation to you. There is a deed for it. Take it and see whether you can make the gift valuable."

"What—what—yo' goin' to do, mistress? Yo' goin' to gib away de place widout nothin' paid fo' it?"

"Yes, Zach. I'm going to give it to you, hoping that it may serve as some reward for your devotion to me during trying times, for standing by me through four bitter years of war when your master was away in the army and since you were made free by the proclamation. I still have this large plantation, but I don't feel that I can make it pay me anything. I am unused to hiring hands to work, and I have not the business capacity nor the capital to raise and dispose of a crop. You can begin in a small way, doing some of the work yourself and hiring a few hands to help you when necessary. Go, Zach. I wish you success."

"Mistress," said the negro, "if yo'll just let me kiss yo' hand once I'll take yo' gift and see what I can do with it."

She held out her hand to him, and he touched it reverently with his lips, then went out to take possession of his plantation.

Twenty years passed.

The widow had each year made a desperate effort to raise a crop of cotton and market it. Some years she had succeeded in reaping sufficient profit to enable her to live and put in the seed for the next year's crop. But she found that when she most needed hands the negroes were least willing to engage, and when she succeeded in inducing them to do so there was no way of keeping them up to their work. The days of the overseer were ended, and the widow had not found a substitute. The consequence was that at last she saw herself an old, broken down woman, her buildings dilapidated for want of having been kept up, her farming utensils either broken or taken away by her hired hands and her treasury empty.

Meanwhile Zach had proceeded on the advice given him by his mistress, beginning by working a few acres himself, saving most of the proceeds of his crops, repairing his buildings with his own hands during the winter season and, as his boys grew older, availing himself of their help. Every season he cultivated more acres than the preceding one till the whole plantation was productive. While many planters sold their best seed to the cottonseed oil manufacturers Zach declined to sell his seed at any price, putting it all into the ground. The result was that he got larger crops, better cotton and higher prices than his neighbors. The time came when he had more money in bank than he cared to use in his plantation.

Zach had often visited his former mistress and begged her to let him do something for her, but the idea of accepting anything from one who had been her slave was repugnant to her, and she always concealed her impoverished condition. But one morning Zach went to the old plantation and as he entered the grounds noticed that there was not a negro on the place. Going into the house he found his mistress sitting before a table on which, though it was her dinner hour, there was nothing but corn pone. The tears came into the man's eyes.

"Mistress," he said, "yo' hain't been treatin' me fair. Yo' been sayin' yo' didn't need nothin', and here yo' air eatin' what want fit fo' yo' field hands in de days when Mars Cunnel war a-libin. Yo' gib me yo' leetle plantation, and I tuk it. Now yo' need meat and bread an' yo' won't take 'em from me. I know I hain't fittin' to gib nothin' to a fine white lady who always gibs away herself, but this air gottin' into a bad way—a mighty bad way—and somepin' hes to be done. I hain't comin' to stand it no longer. I'd come hyer and wuk yo' plantation fo' yo' myself, but I'd haf to hire a lot of these lazy niggers, and I got nuff of 'em now. I got a check fo' some cotton dis mawnin', and I'm goin' to make it paid to yo'. Don't say nothin'. I hain't gibbin' yo' no money—only gibbin' yo' back a leetle bit of what yo' gib me. What I be today widout yo' gibin' me dat plantation?"

While speaking the last words he was making for a writing desk, and, despite the old lady's protest, he wrote on the back of the check the only letters he had ever learned to write, "Zach Travers," and laid the paper before her.

Later, when she gave a reluctant consent to accept the amount offered, Zach took the check to the bank, drew the money and, after making some necessary purchases, brought it back to her. From that time forward, on the first day of every month, she received from Zach a check for $100.

TESLA AND HIS TOWER.

What the Inventor Claims For His "World Telegraphy."

According to Nikola Tesla, the electrical expert, who is perfecting his first "world telegraphy" transmitting station at Wardenclyffe, Long Island, N. Y., the greatest invention of all ages will soon be in working order.

The transmitting station is an octagonal tower, pyramidal in shape and about 150 feet high. It consists of huge wooden stilts, heavily braced and reinforced, and surmounted by a cupola of interlaced steel wires, bent so as to form an arc. In the cupola is a wooden platform occupying its entire width. Beside the tower, which is built on a concrete platform, is the power plant for the transmitter.

No instruments have been installed as yet in the transmitter, nor has Mr. Tesla made public any description of what they will be like. In a recent magazine article, however, he announced that he would transmit from his tower an electric wave of a total maximum activity of 10,000,000 horsepower.

TESLA'S MYSTERIOUS TOWER AT WARDENCYFFE, N. Y.

This, he states, will be possible with a plant of but 100 horsepower by the use of a magnifying transmitter of his own invention and certain artifices which he will make known later.

What the inventor expects to accomplish when his plant is fully inaugurated he sums up as follows: A telegraphic message, almost as noninterferable as thought, can be transmitted to any terrestrial distance. The sound of the human voice, with all its intonations and inflections, can be faithfully and instantly reproduced at any other point on the globe, and the energy of a waterfall can be made available for supplying light, heat or motive power on sea, land or high in the air.

A SOLDIER OF RENOWN.

Field Marshal Nodzu, Commander of Japan's Land Forces.

The most conspicuous military leader of Japan is undoubtedly Field Marshal Count Mitsuura Nodzu, commander in chief of the mikado's army of invasion now operating against Russia along the Yalu. Like most of Japan's famous generals, he began his military career in the war of the restoration, in which he served as captain, and in 1873, at the age of thirty, he had reached the grade of colonel.

He visited the United States in 1870, attending the Centennial exposition and making a study of our military system, taking part in an Indian campaign while thus engaged. Returning to Japan, he performed brilliant service as major general, commanding the Second brigade, in crushing the Sago rebellion. With General Oyama he made an extended tour of Europe and America in 1886, inspecting the various military establishments.

When the war with China broke out, Nodzu was a lieutenant general in command of the Fifth division. A mixed brigade was sent over and beat the Chinese at Asan Korea. Shortly afterward Nodzu, with the remainder of the division, arrived, and finding that the enemy had concentrated a force of 20,000 at Pingyang, he moved rapidly against it and won a complete victory. Another division was then sent to join him, and the two divisions, together about 45,000 strong, became the first army of invasion, of which Yamagata took command.

Yamagata crossed the Yalu, but his health failing, Nodzu was given the command and promoted to the full rank of general. He pushed the Chinese across northern Manchuria, finally terminating the campaign by crushing the enemy at the great battle of Newchwang. For his conduct in this war Nodzu was decorated, made a count and otherwise honored. Field Marshal Nodzu's proved military skill and familiarity with the physical features of Manchuria make him a worthy foe of even Kuropatkin, the great Russian leader.

Posing for Glory

Jocasta and his father and mother before him were true Mexicans. If you had lived in Arizona or New Mexico you might not regard this greatly to their credit, but they thought otherwise. How or why they drifted into the former territory and set up shop has nothing to do with this story. The old man followed the railroad men with dice and cards and fiery liquors; his wife followed him and prepared peppery dishes and sold them over a lunch counter, and Jocasta, well, he brought up the rear to pose and brag and lie and uphold the blood of the family.

POSING IN HIS SADDLE AS HE HAD POSED ON FOOT.

work except to draw his breath and gamble and drink. The old folks would have it so, and he was not fool enough to object to a good thing. They wanted him to represent the family as it once was—proud, haughty, arrogant and careless of money. The role suited him to a dot, and he represented.

No matter what Jocasta thought of himself or how proud his parents were of the strut, even the Chinese dirt diggers on the railroad held him in supreme contempt. He was a butt of ridicule with surgeons, bosses, cowboys and ranchmen and was not considered "game" enough to take seriously. He was generally referred to as "the Peacock" and was looked upon as harmless. Jocasta was a liar. His father and mother were liars before and after him. When he could get any one to listen to him he would descend from his pedestal and tell of the thousands of female hearts he had broken and of the hundreds of men he had had to plant by the wayside. He lied by wholesale and retail, and his hearers laughed at his lies instead of criticizing. There was only one handicap—the first time he was caught cheating at cards the boss of that division took him by the ear and said:

"Don't try it again, my Jim Dandy. The boys are on to your little game, and next time you will be shot full of holes."

Things went wrong with the family after awhile. Other traders came in to divide the profits, the wife had a serious illness, and the father got hurt, and there came a day when the bitterness of death was upon the pair—that is, they had to call Jocasta into the shanty and say to him:

"My son, in your veins runs the blood of Castile. You represent what we were a hundred years ago. We have been proud and glad, and we would that you could keep it up; but, alas, you have to come off the perch and go to work at something. 'This family is dead broke.'"

"I, with these white hands, these small feet, this noble carriage—I go to work!" exclaimed Jocasta in reply.

"Alas, you'll have to or go hungry," they told him.

Jocasta couldn't tumble to the situation. He had posed so long that the idea of anything like manual labor was distasteful to him. He was a good rider and might make a good cowboy, but the descent from Castile to cowboy was too great to think of. He would die first. It came to be known in the camp that "the Peacock" must take a fall, and there was a great deal of curiosity as to what he must turn to. In a sarcastic way he was offered charge of the mule gang, the wheelbarrow gang and so on, but he held his head the higher and made no reply. He had made up his mind to be a high roller to the end. The old man managed to eke him along for a fortnight after breaking the news, but there came a day when not another clack could be raised, when father and mother must be shipped back to Tucson by construction train. Old Castile was in the ditch at last.

"Tomorrow," mused the old man as he sat with his son for the last time—"tomorrow, Jocasta, you will have neither father nor mother here, and to-morrow, alas, you will have to go to work. Need I tell you that the thought breaks my heart? It is humiliation—disgrace—death. Don't you think, my son, that if you were to try some other locality you could do better with the cards?"

"I have been given away for a hundred miles around," was the reply.

"Then you will become a cowboy?"

"Never!"

"But you will not load carts with dirt?"

"A Castilian never yet handled spade or pick."

"True, my son, but—"

There was no more to be said. Next day Jocasta was left an orphan, as it were. His remaining behind was something of a surprise. He dressed himself with unusual care and paraded through the camp to show himself off. Never had his small feet and shapely calves shown to greater advantage; never had he held his backbone stiffer or his chin higher. When through with his promenade—and he did not seek to cut it short—he sauntered back to his shanty and sat down on a nail keg in the sun as his ancestors had sat on their baronial doorsteps. He knew that he was looked upon as a lollybally and a guy, but he forgave the men their ignorance. He knew that a crisis had arrived when he must either fish or cut bait, but he was meeting it as became a man of Castile.

The roadhead had reached the foothills, where there was cover for the Indians who had taken a scalp whenever there was opportunity. On this day a dozen of them, mounted on their war ponies, had been lying in ambush to pick up any straggler from the lines. There were twenty men scattered along the two miles of track as guards, but as noon came and everything seemed quiet they gathered around the rude campfires and cooking booths to eat their midday meal. It was then that Jocasta, busy with his own thoughts and casting eyes around him, saw the Indians gather for a swift gallop to cut off three men who had gone afar for a stick of timber. Without haste and without a word to any one he rose up. A hundred feet away was a pony saddled and bridled and standing in the shade, and in his own belt was the inevitable "gun," though no one could say that he had ever made use of it except as an ornament. Hundreds of eyes watched Jocasta as he sauntered down to the pony with that proud and easy gait of his, and there was neither surprise nor curiosity until he slowly took his seat in the saddle. Then men rose up to wonder if he was going to try horse stealing in broad daylight.

As the right hand gathered up the reins the left lifted the sombrero in dignified salute, and then Jocasta settled down in the saddle and rode straight away. There was a grand yell behind him, and out came a hundred firearms, but before a bullet had been sent whizzing after him the Indians broke cover. Then his plan was grasped, and he was cheered. Straight ahead, posing in his saddle as he had posed on foot, rode Jocasta, the reins now in his left hand and the revolver in his right, and the Indians caught sight of him too late to check up or gear off. He struck them with a crash and set his gun to work, and there was haste to re-enforce him. When a score of mounted men pulled up and dismounted they found the Jim Dandy lying dead on the ground with three bullets in his body, and lying around him within reach of his hand were four war painted bucks whose souls, if they had any, had gone over the great divide in company with his. Men looked and rubbed their eyes to look again. There was Jocasta and there were his dead. He had done what he had done. It was the poser's first and last pose for glory.

Only Natural.
"Speaking of animals, in my opinion the elephant is the cleverest of them all," said the old circus man. "I remember once, many years ago, when Jacko, who was then in my charge, showed me one day that he could read."

"Oh, come now!" said a listener. "I'll prove it to you in about two minutes. Well, as I was saying, the old fellow got into a scrape with the royal Bengal tiger, and before we could get them separated he had his trunk pretty badly damaged. After the scrimmage was over Jacko broke loose and started down the street fast. 'He's gone wild' somebody shouted. 'Don't you believe it,' said I. Now, where do you suppose that elephant went to?"

"Went to the surgeon's, I suppose. Can't you get up a better yarn?"

"No, he didn't go to the surgeon's either. He went straight to a little shop where a sign read, 'Trunks Repaired While You Wait.' Of course he had made a mistake, but what do you expect of a poor dumb brute?"—Chums.

Brief and to the Point.

"No," said Colonel Stillwell; "these new flying machine devices, however interesting in theory, will never be of practical use."

"Why not?"

"How is a man going to think of words like aerodrome and tetrahedral kite when he wants to get home from the club after midnight. What civilization will continue to demand is something simple and incisive, like 'cab.'"—Washington Star.

HIGH LIGHTS OF FASHION.

The New Tailor Made Gown of Paris. Trimmings, Galore.

Grays are extremely attractive this year, ranging from "oyster" to iron gray and elephant gray and affording such a variety of shades that among them almost any woman may find one to wear with comfort and satisfaction to herself. While usually associated with the elder folk, some smart gowns for young women about this useful hue at present. A taking instance is the gray dress of the cut, which is relieved with rich soft buff oriental embroidery. A circular straw hat of pale chestnut brown, looped up with satin ribbon and rhinestone studs, completes a costume as striking as it is practical.

Biscuit and tan shades are to be smart, but low-key complexions are really clear enough for them. A trap for the unwary they prove if there is the least fallow tinge in the skin.

As an item of comfort to those who are not exceedingly slim it should be noted that amid the many fluffy examples of the latest chic there appear certain models of the tailor made order. This type of garment is always becoming to the plump woman and is her exclusive property.

Supple cloth and taffeta radium, a tissue in indescribable shades resembling shot mirror silk, together with infinitesimal clocks, compose exquisite toilets.

It is evident that soft tiny checked canvas and silks made with very fully plaited or tucked skirts will be decidedly popular for elaborate toilet, while cloths in light pastel colors and the new delft blue compose many of the smart tailor made costumes which are particularly noticeable for their perfect simplicity. One especially effective was in light gray tiny checked fine cloth made with a short basket single breasted coat having a black leather belt at the waist. A narrow black taffeta collar opened at the neck to display a white empire chemisette and amber velvet clasp.

The multiplicity of trimmings now necessary if a gown is to be "in it" to the slightest degree it is impossible to describe. Passees, enteries, braid, fringes, drop ornaments all are in demand. Buttons and bows play an important part. The latter occur in immense variety—beads, jet sequins and silk or use combine pearls, rhinestones and spangles and are things of beauty, but how long they will remain a joy is a dubious question.

Newest in trimmings are the quilled ribbons used as a skirt trimming and complemented with a broad, quilled ribbon flounce on the corsage. Silk and velvet striped ribbon is used to form bretelles and revers. An inlet of Scotch plaid taffeta ribbon on waist and skirt forms another unique bit of decoration.

Fashion's Echoes.

A black hat with a picturesque long ostrich plume in azure blue, hyacinth blue, orchid mauve, salad green or other softly beautiful hue completes the fashionable black taffeta costume in splendid style.

A long, narrow, looped bow of white tulle, spangled with silver and holding two short white ostrich tips, is one of the ornaments used to fasten a bride's veil.

Nun's veiling, albatross and gauze are fabrics often seen in silk or satin that may be used for a wedding gown.

Checks and stripes in nun's veiling are up to date for the short, summer walking dress.

Silk finished alpaca makes a useful and stylish hard wearing gown.

The charms of silk and linen are combined in linen de soie, a soft, rather coarse material for morning dresses.

Three-quarter length unlined coats of lousine, taffeta or crape in the lightest tints are dressy summer affairs.

Sleeveless taffeta capes and mantles, lace-trimmed, are one of the Paris fancies.

White snude gloves ornamented with lace applique were worn by a recent bride.

Champagne colored straw is one of the season's favorites in hats, either dressy or plain.

Ribbon flowers and straw flowers are among the popular millinery trimmings.

For the Royal Table Only.

"Your predecessor," said the cannibal chief, "attempted to interfere with our ideas on health food."

A Critical Moment.

The history of the casting of statues is one long story of patience. When Benvenuto Cellini cast his great Perseus according to rules which his own hands had laid down, overwork and exposure had so undermined his strength that the great moment that he was asked to make a statue of Perseus he was too exhausted to do so.

Cellini, however, one of them came first to his room, where he lay down and grew weary with pain, and told his wife that he thought that the statue was a failure and that the metal was lost.

Cellini sprang from his bed, ran across the street and rapidly dragged a load of dry sticks and brush to his furnace. He made a roaring fire, and finding that the base of the statue in his mind had been burned out, he threw in all the better vessels of the household. Then the metal bubbled the great Perseus was cast, and the maker and his faithful friends exulted.

NAILS A KEY TO HEALTH

Finger Tip Diagnosis Explained
by a Chicago Woman.

MENTAL STATUS SEEN AT A GLANCE

Mrs. Amalia Marguerite Forweg Declares All Ills of Mankind Can Be Diagnosed by Study of Nails—Says Palmistry Should Be a Part of Every Physician's Training.

Nail signs, said the physician to determine if he is suffering or about to suffer from appendicitis. Instead let him look at his thumb nails and the inside of his wrist, after which he can quiet his conscience and pocket the physician's fee or else rush pell mell to the operating table and baffle his appendix before it has a chance to struggle with his tranquillity.

This was but one of the lessons that Mrs. Amalia Marguerite Forweg taught the Progressive Health club of Chicago the other day in a little talk called "Nail Reading as the First Aid to Physicians in the Diagnosing of Diseases." Not only appendicitis, but consumption, spinal complaints, Bright's disease and every other ill of man did Mrs. Forweg tell the physicians and other clubwomen how to discover on their nails, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

The speaker said that every physician should have a knowledge of palmistry and that the nails alone always lead to a correct diagnosis of the mentality and physical condition of the patient.

"The thumb alone tells the history of a person," said the speaker. "There are four classes of thumb—the spatulate, square, conic and pointed. Long nails never show such robust health as the short, broad type."

"The spatulate thumb is the square tip with the spade at the top. The person with such a thumb is practical and a good money maker, inventive, active and does not want to be housed up. The square thumb, straight at the top, denotes an orderly, orthodox, reliable, practical, emphatic character. In men it denotes a good business man, in women, a good nurse."

"The conic type is the long, narrow nail and is the nail of the artistic temperament. Musicians, actors, painters, singers and society women have this nail, and I do not like to read the hand of such a person, for the characters are all alike. I do not like to read the hands of society women, for they are all the same and lack ambition. If they did not they would not be contented with their useless lot."

"The nail that is pointed like a cone belongs to the idealists of the world. They are the seers and the prophets, and all mediums have it. Inspiration does not come through the head. It comes through the long, pointed nail. People with this nail are impractical and always have to be taken care of."

In diagnosing disease Mrs. Forweg gave the following illustrations:

"Appendicitis.—The top line in the wrist rises and stands up plainly, and the thumb nail looks rich. Do not wait for an attack, but have an immediate operation."

"Lockjaw.—The thumb falls in. After the patient has been operated on it straightens out."

"Rheumatism.—A thin, brittle nail and a line across the hands."

"Insanity.—A long descending head line across the palm to the side on a line toward the wrist."

"Tuberculosis.—The long, narrow nail bulbed at the end and ridged slightly."

"Throat Trouble.—The big, broad curved thumb nail."

"Paralysis.—Nail flat and flaring at the top."

"Throat, Chest and Lung Troubles.—Long nails."

"The little red spots on the heart line in the palm tell of heart disease, but most people who think they have heart disease are only suffering from indigestion."

"And all of this and much more can be learned just the same as dancing or French," said she.

Mrs. Forweg urged that physicians operate on the "thumb center of the brain" for lockjaw or paralysis.

"In these cases the thumb is usually crooked," she said, "but if the operation is successful it becomes straight."

Money in Renting Chucking Hens.

Renting out chucking hens is the new business venture of a well known Montgomery (Pa.) liverman, and he finds it more profitable than chicken raising, says the Philadelphia Record. The liverman, finding that his hens were beginning to sit very early and, not having had first class luck in the poultry business in former years, posted a placard announcing the rental of his "chuckers" at 75 cents for the season.

The scheme was a great success, and in a short time the demand was greater than the supply. He fed all the hens with food mixed with red pepper to make them sit, and finally took to the woods for more "chuckers." He traveled up through Montgomery county purchasing laying hens at low prices, and at present has rented out nearly 100. In calculating his profits on the scheme he claims he saved the feed, gets 75 cents a head for the hens used and will have them to sell in the fall.

Scarfpin With Wearer's Monogram.

Monogram scarfpins are among the latest in cravat jewelry, says Men's Wear. A plain highly burnished plate of gold in shield or oval design surmounts a scroll or crest. The plate is engraved with the purchaser's initial or monogram, as desired.

IT IS FOR LADIES, TOO.
They Can Stop Their Hair Falling Out
With Herpicide.

Ladies who have thin hair and whose hair is falling out, can prevent the hair falling out, and thicken the growth, with Newbro's "Herpicide." Besides, Herpicide is one of the most agreeable hair dressings there is. Herpicide kills the dandruff germ that eats the hair off at the root. After the germ is destroyed, the root will shoot up, and the hair grow long as ever. Even a sample will convince any lady that Newbro's Herpicide is an indispensable toilet requisite. It contains no oil or grease, it will not stain or dye. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

SATURDAY'S BIG CROWDS

Were Given the Best Street Car Service in Newark's History, on Interurban and City Lines--Splendid Police Arrangements Prevent Much Lawlessness.

Never before in Newark's history has there been such excellent street car service, as was given the large crowd today, and it is extremely doubtful if conditions exist in any city in Ohio which would make it possible to be equalled.

General Manager Harrison realized that both interurbans and city lines under his control would be called upon to handle a capacity business, and his plans were made accordingly.

The interurban service was all that could be desired, and from early morning incoming cars from Columbus and Zanesville brought in crowds of rural visitors. This excellent service was under the direct supervision of F. A. Bantelle, superintendent of transportation of these roads, and he saw to it that every facility at hand was brought into use to make it as nearly perfect as possible.

The service on the city lines and to and from Granville was under the direct supervision of Superintendent F. L. Mowery, and was in every detail the best ever given in Newark.

From noon until late at night an actual minute service was maintained

ANNIVERSARY

Of the Sixty-Fifth Birthday of Mrs. Mary A. Patton Fittingly Celebrated Last Week.

Hanover, O., May 9.—One of the grandest social affairs of the season was the celebration of the sixty-fifth anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Mary A. Patton, at her home near West Carlisle, O., a few days ago. At high noon a sumptuous dinner was served, after which a short program was rendered, which had been prepared by the children and grandchildren. After the rendition of the program came the presentation of a number of handsome and useful presents consisting of silver and glassware and kerchiefs. Following is the program of exercises that was carried out: Song, by the family, "No Never Alone." Speech, "Found Dead," Delphia A. Patton. Solo, "My Old Country Home," La Verta P. Lake. Recitation, "When the Angels Touch the Stone," Agnes Patton. Mrs. La Verta spoke a piece concerning her late brother, entitled "Bachelor's Love Predicament." Recitation by little Ruth Patton, subject, "Thankfulness," which was followed by a song by the family, "No, Not One." The program concluded with the reading of a biography of this county from Washington county, Pa. In the year of 1819 and seven years later, this son was born. He like other boys, enjoyed sport but never went beyond his means to gain pleasures. He spent most of his school life in two schoolhouses, one which stands on Jessie Aschcraft's farm, and the other on Russell Aschcraft's farm. As to a moral life he was instructed in the West Carlisle Presbyterian church, where afterwards he became a member.

CROWN PRINCE WILLIAM OF GERMANY.

It is said that Crown Prince William of Germany, whose latest picture is given herewith, will soon be betrothed to Princess Thyra, daughter of the crown prince of Denmark. The Kaiser favored Princess Alexandra of Cumberland as a possible daughter-in-law, but the young woman and her father, the Duke of Cumberland, preferred the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin as a suitor.

Then came the meeting of his present wife, which finally ended in the single blessedness by entering into the holy bonds of matrimony with the afore mentioned Archibald Patton.

After their marriage they settled on the Patton homestead, where the aged widow still resides. To this union ten children were born. They struggled for years rearing their family, he being occupied in farming, raising the necessities that the farm produced. And she, faithful wife, cared for her little ones, and performed her household duties with the aid of his aged mother, until the good Spirit called her home.

Flora, oldest at the age of eighteen, was married to William Aschcraft, and five children with father, survived the mother.

Then comes John B., who was united in marriage with Emma W. McKee, in December, 1833, and to this union two children, which, with the father, survive the mother. He remained single four years and was again united in marriage with Sarah McKee, who is his present wife. Next came Mary Emma, at the age of 24, married J. W. Baker, September 17, 1855. To this union was born one child, which, with the father survive the mother. He remaining single nearly four years, then married Mary Elizabeth Mendenhall. Then comes the bachelor brother, James Franklin, who is still believing there is no one like mother.

William married Lottie N. McKee in October, 1832. To this union three children were born. Then comes Martha B., who married George F. Lake, April, 1836. To this union two children were born. Then Effa A., who died in childhood, at the early age of seven. Hugh Wallace married to Mae Frost, March, 1899. To this union two children were born, the youngest dying in infancy. Then La Verta M. married Ora Glenn Lake, November, 1899. To this union one child was born. Then Frederic, who is still living with his mother.

At the present day this leaves the mother with seven children and fifteen grandchildren to cheer the mother's old age.

Certainly this union has been a success. The husband being as honest as the wife, was sympathetic and now that the father and three daughters have preceded them to the better land where cares and sorrows are never known and all is one bright day.

MEN'S MEETING

In Tayler Hall Sunday Led By First Presbyterian Church Young Men.

The Men's Meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon was in charge of the young men of the First Presbyterian church. The large male chorus of that church rendered a fine musical program of Gospel songs. Mr. Irvin Warthen sang "The Angels Anthem" by Schnecker.

Mr. H. H. Leist led the devotional service, and Messrs. W. E. Painter, Arthur Pratt, R. F. Williams and Ray Evans gave a well prepared study of the life of Samuel. The young men of the Congregational church will have charge of the meeting next Sunday afternoon.

RED MEN

From Newark Will Attend State Convention of the Order to Be Held in Mansfield

A large number of the members of Minnawa Tribe of Red Men of this city, will attend the State Convention of the Improved Order of Red Men, which convened in Mansfield today, and will continue over Wednesday. A number of Indians went up to Mansfield today but the great majority of the tribe will take the trail for that city tomorrow. The Mansfield Indians are prepared for the reception of a large number to guests, and it is expected that the meeting will be one of the largest held for years.

CAPITALISTS

FROM BOSTON INSPECTED THEIR INTERURBAN SATURDAY.

Made a Trip From Columbus to Zanesville, a Distance of 64 Miles in About Two Hours.

The special part of eastern money men who have been looking over the interurban properties in Central Ohio, especially the Columbus, Newark and Zanesville road, left Zanesville Saturday afternoon for the north, apparently well pleased with their entertainment of the day. Remarkably fast time was reached over various divisions of the different roads, although no attempt was made at speed and the trip from Columbus to Zanesville, a distance of 64 miles, was covered in a little more than two hours.

The special parlor car bearing the party left Columbus at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, arriving in Zanesville shortly after 11 o'clock. The new road of the company was carefully inspected at comparatively slow speed.

The construction work is heavy with numerous cuts and fills and one tunnel. The scenery is very wild and picturesque, especially near Black Hand. The people of Zanesville seem highly elated at the prospect of hourly passenger service to and from Newark, and promise a large patronage to the road. The eastern capitalists who made the trip were very favorably impressed with the property, the cities visited and the country traversed by the Buckeye Lake and the Newark and Zanesville roads.

The party was composed of S. Reed Anthony, F. L. Salfonstall and Chauncey Eldridge, of the firm of Tucker, Anthony & Co. of Boston; Edward H. Clark of New York, representative of the estate of Senator Hearst, Frederick L. Eldridge, first vice president of the Knickerbocker Trust Co., of New York; Caleb L. McKee, the well-known broker of Columbus; Frank A. Durban, president of the Zanesville Railway and Light Co., James R. Fitzgibbon, prosecuting attorney of Licking county; Charles P. Davis, general eastern manager of the General Electric company; Thomas Pettigrew, chief engineer, and J. R. Harrigan, general manager of the Columbus, Newark and Zanesville Traction company.

MOSES NYE

MOBBED BY COLORED CONGREGATION AT SPRINGFIELD

He Was Conducting Services in the Church and Bitterly Attacked Tenets of Free Masonry

Springfield, O., May 9.—Rev. Moses Nye of Dayton, who claims to be a converted Jew, came near being mobbed here Sunday while occupying the pulpit at the morning service of the North Street A. M. E. church, the leading colored congregation of the city. Rev. Nye made a most vicious attack on Free Masonry, and began reading what he claimed to be the first three obligations and the penalty of exposing the same.

Before he had finished Hugh Logan, infirmity director; Major R. R. Rudd, of the Ninth Battalion, O. N. G.; Otis Fletcher, John McKee and John White, prominent members of the congregation, sprang from their seats and rushed upon the rostrum and dragged Nye from the pulpit. They handled him very roughly, and Nye pleaded with them not to do him bodily harm.

Rev. Mr. Nixon, pastor of the congregation, who was occupying a seat near the speaker, probably saved Nye from serious injury. Nixon implored the men to release Nye, impressing on their minds that they were in a house dedicated to God and beseeching them not to stain it with blood.

Finally quiet was restored, and the five men agreed to release him upon condition that he would not be permitted to speak further. The pastor promised them and Nye was satisfied. Still trembling, he hastily left the church by a rear door.

Nye was formerly in the clothing business in Newark, but recently moved to Dayton. He claims he has been converted, and is spending most of his time preaching.

Capt. Miles Standish of Telluride, Col., says for nearly forty years he has kept a bottle of Hamlin's Wizard Oil in his house because it has proven itself to be the greatest of all household remedies. 50c at all druggists.

A CRAZY MAN

FOUND EATING AN EGG, SHELL AND ALL.

Rational people thought it was awful, as the shell had no food value, and was, of course indigestible and injurious.

It is just as crazy for rational people to swallow a lot of cod liver oil, to get the medicinal curatives from it, as it was for the crazy man to eat the egg, shell and all.

Modern science has proved that the oil, or greasy part of cod liver oil, has no value whatever, and only upsets the stomach and retards recovery. It is the medicinal elements which are enveloped in the cod liver oil of which there about fifty, that represent all the tonic and curative power of the famous oil remedy.

A preparation containing all the medicinal curative elements of cod liver oil, actually taken from fresh cods' livers, but entirely free from oil or grease, must, therefore, be the very best tonic reconstructor possible. Such is Vinol. It positively does contain every one of the fifty odd medicinal curative elements of cod liver oil, fresh and sweet, just as the egg shell contains the nutritious food, and we throw away the useless, indigestible oil, just as we throw away the egg shell.

Knowing its wonderful medicinal and curative power, we guarantee to restore health and strength to the following or refund their money without question:

Run down, debilitated, tired, overworked people; old people, weak women nursing mothers, puny, ailing children, convalescents, or to people suffering with hard colds, hacking coughs, incipient consumption and bronchitis. Vinol never fails to make rich, red blood and give strength to the weak and health to the sick. Try it on your guarantee. If it doesn't do you any good it won't cost you a cent. Frank D. Hall, Druggist.

CRAZED WITH MORPHINE

Dess Wilson, a Young Woman of the Half World, Escaped from the Rescue Home and Wandered About the Streets in Her Night Clothes.

Dess Wilson, an inmate of Mrs. Hutchinson's resort on Walnut street, escaped from the Rescue Home Saturday night and, crazed with morphine, wandered about the city in her night clothes when she was arrested and taken to the city prison.

The Wilson girl is 22 years of age and is known in Newark by the name of Samantha Thompson, her home being in Zanesville. Early Saturday evening Mrs. Hutchinson thought it best to send her back to her home in Zanesville, because of her nervous condition.

For this purpose she was driven to the B. & O. depot in a hack, but when there she ran away and came back to the mission on Walnut street. She was taken to the Rescue Home. After retiring she jumped out of a window in her night clothes and wandered about that portion of the city. A colored man, named Ransom, saw her in the yard in front of Mr. Ed. Kibler's residence. He followed her. She walked to Raccoon creek, which she twice waded into.

Ransom notified the police and Chief Sheridan and Officer Brooke responded, arresting her on the West Main street bridge about 2 o'clock Sunday morning.

She informed the officers where her clothes were to be found and the same were procured for her. She frequently called for morphine at the city prison. She is a physical wreck. Her mother who lives in Zanesville, was sent for and the girl will be taken to her home Monday.

In the probate court today an affidavit of lunacy was filed against Dessie Wilson, an inmate of the Rescue Home, who was found wandering about the streets of the city on Saturday night in her night clothes. She will have a hearing before the probate court on Tuesday morning.

GRANVILLE NOTES.

FUNERAL OF MRS. JOHN CROSS.

Granville, O., May 9.—The funeral of the late Mrs. John Cross took place this morning at 10 o'clock, and was largely attended. The services were conducted by the Rev. Frank Gilliland, pastor of the Methodist church, of which the deceased had for many years been a member. The remains were taken to Johnstown, where the interment was made in the cemetery at that place.

Misses Shirley Pittser and Ida Moore of Newark, visited friends in Granville on Friday.

An important meeting of the Calliopean society will be held on Friday evening, when it is desired that all members who can possibly do so be present.

Mrs. Joseph Bond and Miss Louise Bond of Chicago, have been visiting at the home of Mrs. Dr. Hunt for some days. Mrs. Bond and daughter have been spending the winter in Paris.

Arthur N. Peckham, who has been confined to his room at the home of Dr. Colwell, for some days, has nearly recovered from his illness, and is able to be out again.

ZANESVILLE

CUT OUT OF BARNUM & BAILEY'S ITINERARY

The Big Circus Cancels the Date There on Decoration Day—Will Be Here May 31.

Barnum & Bailey's date for May 30 in Zanesville, has been cancelled. Instead of the big aggregation will show here some time the latter part of July although the exact date has not yet been decided.

All the arrangements for the appearance of the show on Decoration day had been completed. Contracts for feeding both the many actors and attaches, and also the animals had already been made, and all of these were cancelled for May 30, but they were made for a date in the latter part of July.

This is commentary enough as a comparison of Newark and Zanesville as good live towns. The Ringling Brothers' circus which last Saturday showed to thousands in Newark, this year cut Zanesville off its schedule and will not appear there. Now the Barnum & Bailey aggregations "cut out" the town and cancels a holiday, May 30, while the Newark date, May 31, is retained.

Had not every consideration been in favor of Newark it is a "cinch" that, in view of the dates, and the fact that Ringlings' exhibition here Saturday cannot help but effect the patronage of Barnum & Bailey on the 31st, this latter show would have been glad if it were to cancel one date to let the Newark date go.

But instead the big circus will be here on May 31, and Zanesville has only a problematical date in July.

EAST NEWARK

Fred Chapman spent Sunday in Zanesville.

Mrs. McClaran of Zanesville is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Fred Squiggin of East Main street.

Mrs. Kate Barrett of Denison and her son John, have returned home.

Mr. Nevill Julian of Columbus, called on his sister, Mrs. J. B. Rovey on his way East.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen McCoy, of Mt. Vernon, spent Sunday with Mrs. Huffer and family of Lawrence street.

L. D. Edgar of Utica spent Sunday with his daughter, Mrs. Charles Barrett.

Mrs. Bland is visiting in Zanesville with old friends.

Mrs. Dr. Wells is visiting Miss D. Alseo.

Rev. F. M. Swineheart of Bainbridge, O., who preached for Rev. T. W. Locke, was so much liked that we hope he will come among us again.

The dinner given in honor of Mrs. Smeltz of Greenwood, Ind., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fromholtz, was greatly enjoyed. Four courses were served. The guests were Mrs. Smeltz, Mr. and Mrs. Andorn, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Brown and family, Mr. Jos. Fromholtz.

Theodore Caw was called to Zanesville Sunday to the bedside of his father.
